Introducing collection course ordering

2024-02-29 - Ester Andersson - Product Highlight

We are thrilled to unveil an exciting new feature: the ability to arrange courses within collections. This enhancement empowers you to provide your learners with a structured roadmap for their educational journey. Now, you can prescribe a recommended course completion sequence, ensuring a smooth and logical progression through your learning program.

Whether certain courses must be tackled in a specific order to meet prerequisites or to optimize comprehension, or if arranging them simply streamlines the learning path, this feature offers clarity for learners as they can now navigate through your content with confidence, knowing the optimal sequence to follow.

To order courses within a collection, go to the collection page and use the + and - to arrange the order.

The screenshot displays the 'New at Learnifier' collection page. At the top, there's a 'Go to' dropdown and a 'Catalog builder' button. The collection title is 'New at Learnifier', and a note states 'This page is not visible to learners'. Under the 'Courses' section, there's a search bar and a list of 'Attached courses (3)'. A green arrow points to the ordering controls for the first course, 'Preboarding', which shows a minus sign, the number '1', and a plus sign. The other two courses, 'Onboarding' and 'Cyber-security training', are listed below it with numbers 2 and 3 respectively. Each course entry includes a thumbnail, title, status (Active), and a trash icon. On the right, there's a 'Collection settings' button and status indicators for 'Visibility: Active' and 'Categories: No categories selected'. A 'Love Learn Leads?' graphic is also visible.

Order	Course Name	Status
1	Preboarding	Active
2	Onboarding	Active
3	Cyber-security training	Active
